LIBRARY COLLECTIONS

Libraries are characterized by ever continuing growth. It happens in the case of practically all of them that sooner or later the problem arises of finding space for the new material which constantly arrives. Nothing can be thrown away since even the most insignificant item may some day be called for by someone. A continual shifting is necessary to remove the least frequently used books to the less accessible shelves or relegate them to dark corners or basement store rooms.

What to do with old editions of textbooks and treatises which have become obsolete through receipt of later ones, is a most annoying problem. There is also the case of the periodicals and serials which have been discontinued or issued under altered names and auspices.

The systematic and convenient arrangement of the collections in large reference libraries which have outgrown the quarters provided for them, is just one of the many difficulties with which librarians are confronted. At the Army Medical Library where the stacks are in two main divisions on separate floors of the building, it has been necessary to adopt the plan of arranging the current periodicals according to the Union List in one series on one floor and all discontinued journals in their proper order in the stacks on the floor below. Although these numerous journals have become defunct as far as their continued publication is concerned, they are still alive in that they contain original source observations and descriptions of experimental investigations which are of inestimable value to future research. Their contents have all been indexed or cataloged and unless full use is made of them, needless repetitions and wasted effort will certainly result. They are all out of print and can rarely be secured by libraries or research institutions founded since their publication.

The serious handicap to the progress of research presented by these dead journals has fortunately been largely overcome by the introduction of microfilm copying. They can now be reproduced in the form of microfilm copies for deposit in libraries not able to obtain them otherwise, or the separate articles in them can be microfilmed for individuals having need of them in the particular investigations or compilations of literature upon which they are engaged. Thus, the larger libraries having collections of material no longer obtainable by other libraries, have the possibility through microfilm copying of making this rare material readily and conveniently available, either directly or through other libraries, to all having need of it in their work.

The Photoduplication Service of the Army Medical Library is being operated for this and every other purpose by which the exceptionally complete collection of medical literature here assembled may be used in the most complete manner for the advancement of medicine.

A NEW MICROFILM VIEWER

After many delays which were occasioned by the war emergency, the microfilm viewer pictured above has finally been put into quantity production. It is being sent now, to all those who have asked to be put on the list to receive it. To others who request microfilms from the Photoduplication Service of the Army Medical Library, it will be sent on approval. The price, $3.75, is what we transmit to the manufacturer. Our own contribution is simply that of acting as intermediary in getting them promptly into the hands of those who need them.

The viewer is provided with a space for the film which is large enough to receive a kodachrome or other pictorial slide. This will enable the manufacturer to offer them to the general public at a later date, through photographic supply dealers. Thus will be reached a sufficiently large market to permit an eventual lowering of the price.

A microfilm viewer of this type has the advantage that it can be held before the eyes while the body assumes whatever position is most comfortable, instead of requiring the position to be adjusted to that of a projector screen or of the pages of a bound volume. It should be noted that the first reaction of most persons who examine a monocular microfilm viewer is that it is difficult to use. Naturally, it is quite different from reading a printed page. Considering the relative infrequency of reading films and the far greater convenience of being able to read them at your desk instead of having to go to a central office to use a projector or having to make long trips to libraries to consult the originals, an effort to accustom oneself to a monocular viewer is well worthwhile in spite of difficulties experienced in its use.

It is adapted especially to the needs of those in isolated places and of those who wish to take the literature pertaining to their work, to their homes or elsewhere for more leisurely study than is possible in the laboratory or the library.

Orders, including payments for the microfilm viewer shown above, should be sent to
